Nelson Bay

Nelson Bay is a beautiful coastal resort town, its 18 m above sea-level and 209 km north of Sydney via the Pacific Motorway and Nelson Bay Road.

Nelson Bay is one of the premier locations on the New South Wales coast for dolphin and whale-watching. Humpback whales pass by the coast between September and November headed for the Antarctic and can also be seen heading to the tropics to breed between late May and July. We do suggest catching the Local Ferry across Port Stephens to Tea Gardens. Apart from being a delightful journey it also travels past pods of dolphin who seem to enjoy racing the ferry.

Another recommendation is going to Anna Bay, the huge sand dunes at the northern end of Stockton Beach have become a magnet for enterprising entrepreneurs. For those seeking adventure there are the sand dunes at Anna Bay which can be enjoyed on horseback, Quad bikes or by 4WD.

Coffs Harbour

Located halfway between Sydney and Brisbane, the subtropical climate, tranquil rainforests and clean uncrowded beaches of Coffs Harbour ('Coffs' to locals) make it one of the most popular holiday destinations on the New South Wales north coast. With natural attractions, adventure activities and cultural pursuits in equal measure, Coffs Harbour works well for singles, couples and families.

It's also a good halfway point between Sydney and Brisbane if you're road tripping along the Pacific Coast. You can't miss the Big Banana when you're there, adjacent to the highway, this enormous replica of the yellow fruit was Australia's first 'big thing'. The big Banana fun park is home to a water park with four large thrill slides, a toboggan ride, mini gold and a café.
